NUEVO LAREDO, MEXICO

Five Dead in Nuevo Laredo Shootings

Police in Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, say gunmen killed five people in one day during separate attacks.

That brings to 101 the number of slayings so far this year in Nuevo Laredo, which is across the border from Laredo, Texas.

Authorities believe many of those killings are part of a drug-related turf war.

Police last night found a man's body riddled with bullets on a sidewalk of a working-class neighborhood.

His name wasn't immediately released.

Earlier, gunmen killed 19-year-old Carlos Madrigal and 20-year-old Gabino Sanchez as they stood on a street.

Also yesterday, assailants fatally shot 14-year-old Hermes Villanueva and 29-year-old Rosalio Jimenez in a pharmacy two blocks away from an international bridge.

Police say Villanueva's father was wounded and is hospitalized in critical condition.
